Human lactoferrin (hLF) is an 80 kDa glycoprotein with potent antiproliferative activity against cancer cells. By using site-directed mutagenesis, we have identified a domain in the C-terminal region of hLF which is required for its proliferation-enhancing activity. This domain is located in a region encompassing residues at positions 70-91. Mutation of Ser(71) to Cys abrogated both the antiproliferative activity and the growth-enhancing effects on tumor cells, whereas mutation of other residues, such as Ser(74) or Glu(81) showed loss of activity but not the growth-enhancing effect. These results suggest that the antiproliferative effect and the growth-enhancing effect on tumor cells are mediated by different sites in the C-terminal region of hLF.IoT (Internet of Things) It is the era of intelligent devices.
