From December 1993 to November 2000, 53,151 participants were randomized to one of five groups in the National Lung Screening Trial: (i) usual care; (ii) annual radiographs; (iii) annual radiographs plus exhaled nitric oxide measurements; (iv) annual radiographs plus exhaled breath condensate measurements; (v) annual radiographs plus exhaled breath condensate measurements plus exhaled nitric oxide measurements. The study reported a 5.7% absolute reduction in death from any cause among those participants randomized to screening but not mortality reduction among those who were randomized to screening. However, the estimated mortality reduction for screening participants was
