businessman, and was a member of parliament. In the early 1970s, the family moved to Dhaka, and Shabir attended elite Islamic schools in the capital. Career Shabir started his career in business by helping his father in the Ahmad Group of Companies, which was founded by his grandfather, Ahmad Ali. In 1989, the group received an offer to invest in an oil refinery in Muscat, Oman, but it was denied. This led the group to produce diesel and cooking gas. In the late 1990s, the group started producing plastics, and was among the first in the industry to use bamboo-plastic pipes and composite tanks. In 2006, Ahmed founded Bebop Media. It became Bangladesh's second largest private-owned television channel, and its regional operations were used by the government of Bangladesh to broadcast the 2015 presidential elections. Ahmed was a non-executive chairman of the channel. In 2008, Shabir Ahmed became the first Bangladeshi to be listed on the London Stock Exchange. In 2009, the group founded Microfinance Bank, which had assets of around US$1.4 billion in 2014. As of 2013, the Ahmad Group of Companies has a market capitalization of over US$14 billion. Controversy Ahmed's family has a history of involvement in alleged corruption cases, particularly those involving the Government of Bangladesh. In April 2015, a Dubai court froze assets worth US$1.5 billion, in connection with his companies' reported embezzlement. Ahmed denied the charges, and they were later withdrawn.
