An unprecedented crisis facing the LGBTQ+ community The recent worldwide spread of the Coronavirus, a type of pneumonia, has generated a pandemic, placing the LGBTQ+ community in its crosshairs. The Coronavirus is a new virus that was first detected in China. It causes symptoms similar to the common cold, with some having severe complications. It has already affected more than 134,000 people and claimed more than 6,000 lives. It is now spreading across the globe. The outbreaks have prompted the WHO to issue the highest level of alert. Experts claim that the outbreaks will continue to spread until we are able to stop the progression of the virus and provide the best possible treatments. Therefore, this has caused great concern. The unprecedented situation This is not the first time we have seen an outbreak of a virus that poses a risk to the LGBTQ+ community. There have been outbreaks of the HIV virus and Hepatitis C virus (HCV) that have placed the LGBTQ+ community in their crosshairs. In 2017, there were a total of almost 300 cases of HIV in the Philippines. There were also 18 cases of HCV and 45 cases of Hepatitis B. Out of the 304 HIV cases, 198 were men who have sex with men (MSM). This means that almost 60% of the cases were MSM. This means that the LGBTQ+ community was affected by the HIV and Hepatitis viruses. This is because the HIV virus can enter the blood of the body through a variety of routes. These include needles and blood transfusions, but can also come from sexual contact. Hepatitis C virus can also be transmitted through sexual contact. It can also be transmitted through injections and can pass through blood transfusions and blood products. The impact of the virus As the coronavirus is considered a new virus, medical professionals are still not certain about its impact. What they do know, however, is that it is not an easy virus to 2d92ce491b
