A: Try this: SELECT * FROM File_Name WHERE File_Name REGEXP '\.pdf'; Q: Setting default date to current time in PHP I want to set current time to a date field while inserting a new record. Currently I have date field 'startdate' in my table. How to change this date value to current time? I am using date like this $row = mysql_fetch_array($result); $startdate = $row['startdate']; A: $row = mysql_fetch_array($result); $startdate = new DateTime($row['startdate']); $startdate->format('Y-m-d H:i:s'); You'll need to add the new date to your code as the query isn't returning the date in a format that your php code can accept. So we format it the only way that it can be validated as a date. Q: How do I setup the environment for a CMake project where we install an executable created by CMake itself? I have a project that runs some tests. The tests require a simulation library to be run, this library has its own set of unit tests that we run as part of the CI process. Our current model is that they are run manually, by running the test executable manually (which we have forked and improved). However I can't figure out how to add them to the cmake, so they will run automatically when installing. Also I wanted to share the library in separate git repo, which I add to our CMake project's repo. If I had a simplified version of the project, I would do something like this: Run: git clone (sample test project) cd supertest cmake. make install Create a git repo git clone supertest Now I can create a test project on my computer that does the same thing:
