Executable, RdocEx RdocEx is not a command line tool. No, it is a Shell Command-line Tool. It is a shell script that can execute commands and then save the output to a file. The settings must be inside a folder called app.

They are not settings, they are hard-coded information about which menu to add to. It is normal to have a --help option or a help menu item under that (though even that can be disabled for simplicity). No, the name of the RdocEx tool is a common convention for tools that use an rdoc toolchain. They are unique in that they store the output of their commands in a file (rdoc file) and store it as a RDoc file which can be used with rdoc --builder to create a RDoc file. You must not, and cannot, save the output to a file or any other format. Saving to a file is only useful if you intend to use RDoc on that file, which you may not.

===== RdocEx was created to be a small application that adds an application to your Most Recent Documents menu and to the Windows Start Menu, allowing you to run files for editing. Once you have multiple documents opened, you can easily use the same program to edit multiple documents. You can choose the programs for the various documents that you create and save as you edit them. It will open documents from RDoc, but can also open Documents, Office Documents, HTML documents, Images, PPT, PowerPoint, Zip and RDoc directory. RdocEx Homepage: =====

Download RdocEx Why install this addon? It's lightweight, has a fast first run, is able to keep your preferred applications, and is integrated with your user directory. It's just like it sounds. How do you install RdocEx? Download and unpack the archive into your '~/.wine/drive_c/Program Files/RoR/Tools'. Delete the executable unless you plan to use RdocEx as your shell. Using RdocEx RdocEx adds three items to your Recent Documents menu. To add something to your Recent Documents menu, you need to look for it in ~/.wine/dosdevices/c:/Documents and Settings//.Local/recent/RdocExRecent File.txt. Add the document name, space, and folder separator. '~/.wine/dosdevices/c/Documents and Settings/myusername/.Local/recent/RdocExRecentFile.txt'. On Linux, replace 'myusername' by 'suserid'. On Windows, double-click the item.

RdocEx Recent File menu When RdocEx is installed as your shell, the above command opens RdocEx, and you don't have to do anything else. When RdocEx is installed as an application, the above command will add an item to your Recent Documents menu by default. On Linux, you need to change the directory. On Windows, it will add the file to the Documents and Settings directory. You can remove it. RdocEx Ex commands and parameters The Linux command line looks like this: `/opt/RdocEx/bin/rdocex $1 $2` Where $1 is the document name. The Windows command line looks like this: `rdocex.exe $1 $2` Where $1 is the document name and $2 is the 'explorer.exe /select, $1' command. The RdocEx param file will contain an 'explorer.exe' section, which contains all your preferred documents. Note:

You need to add the following section,
