A: A word processor named "Writer" can convert to LaTeX. It is available as a free download. To convert from LaTeX to Word, there are two approaches. One is to use the LaTeX2Word converter from www.nongnu.org and the other is to use the LaTeX2HTML converter in InDesign. These are both very painful and slow to use. If you use the first approach, you will have to deal with the TeX file directly. Either find the source, which you will have to modify, or use some macro package (I'd use ConTeXt in this case). The second approach gives you the source, but no easy way to get from the resulting Word document back to LaTeX. A: Here is the direct answer to your question: there is a LaTeX package called: which allows you to convert LaTeX documents to Word. A: If you have Latex
