Data Class in Java I have some method with boolean return type as parameter I want to make such that if the return value is true then update one row in DB (if true for all conditions then update all row) What should I do? I want to make a class which returns true or false so that I will make a method of calling that class with all the input parameters. So far I have some form of abstraction which returns the field name and then my class which has the reference to the SQL query and update it. Is there any such library which can do it for me? Any help is appreciated.

A: You could use: try { // Your stuff here //... if (something == true) { // Do your updates here } } catch (Exception e) { 570a42141b
