The development of “HyperMotion Technology” was a challenge for the L.A. Galaxy to ensure that the creation of a playable FIFA match would do justice to the game’s world-class players, who had the fastest and most dynamic movements on the pitch. “We have spent a year and a half ensuring that our competitors do not copy our game by simply collecting data from real players,” said Dru Maeder, Executive Producer for FIFA. “The biggest challenge for us was to have the players involved in the same intensity and dynamic as the players in the game. “Our players are the very best footballers in the world and were made to move as they do in the game. We took their data and developed for them. We worked closely with them to ensure that our game would be as good as they are.” The development team leveraged and explored a number of different motion capture data collection techniques to best capture the real-time dynamic movements of the players, and as a result of this work they have managed to significantly improve the performance of animations and game physics. “The biggest challenge was the real-time reaction of the body to a tackle,” said Maeder. “We used a 360-degree motion capture suit on each player and recorded the specific movements of each player while they were fully immersed in football match. “What that data means to us is that when you look at a moment like a tackle, you see it in the game because we got it right. We then brought that motion data to our 3D engine and used it to build the game mechanics. “We now have the ability to add to the game a true representation of the reality of real-time player movement. Players are constantly surprising you. You have to defend against them, anticipate their moves, and react.” Maeder further added: “Whether you play a different brand of football like FIFPro or you are a local player, this is your chance to play and compete in a real-time football game that is life-sized, powerful and responsive.” The development team also implemented “The New Standard in Player Reflexes and Ball Physics”, which will not only produce more realistic ball and player movement in the game, but will also help foster the flow of the game. “At the heart

FIFA is the biggest sports franchise in the world with more than 220 million registered players and growing. FIFA 20 experienced the biggest launch day of all time. FIFA 19 was the best-selling FIFA game of all time, while EA SPORTS FIFA 18 was the best-selling sports game of all time and the FIFA franchise has shipped more than 70 million units in total. 20 FIFA World Cup™ EA SPORTS™ FIFA World Cup™ 2019 will feature more than 80 licensed players, five new stadiums and eight modes including Exhibition, Beach Soccer, Countdown, Exhibitions, Concacaf Nations League and the new Fan Series. Fans can watch, stream and score real-time across two platforms: iOS and Android. In addition to the official competition, fans can now play Game Changers (cross-platform matches where you can play with friends from both platforms) and FIFA 19 Challenges (cross-platform challenges between players from FIFA 19 and FIFA 20 including permadeath). The first FIFA World Cup features 16 new tournament modes, including the return of Historic Matches, and delivers global reach and global competition, all in one package. FIFA Ultimate Team Ultimate Team is the biggest in-game card collection. It is also the most authentic way to play and take your squad into the biggest leagues around the world. In FIFA 20, ULTIMATE TEAM rolled out globally, with more than 500 cards launched in all, including 120 first-wave Premier League players and unique game-changing abilities that will transform the gameplay experience. The second season of ULTIMATE TEAM includes new main-card packs, and more rare and rarer players will unlock deeper into the game. A Player of the Month club inspired by the popular feature in Ultimate Team was also introduced. It releases exclusive cards into FIFA Ultimate Team based on monthly stats. The new season will see a new Player of the Week and other surprises for the FIFA community. The Journey FIFA 20 introduced The Journey, a series of new and improved modes that focus on progression and independence, including Career Mode and Squad Building. In Career Mode, you can earn achievements, manage items and transfer up to three players at a time. Squad Building was created to help new players explore what FIFA has to offer, with new options for customising your team and tactics, new game types, and a new Packaging system that lets you sell high-end items like Outfit cards, Creation Kit packs and Autograph Cards.
