Note Photoshop, Elements, and Photoshop Express are all offered as subscription services. That means that you need to pay a monthly fee in order to use the software. For more information on how to buy the software, see Choosing an Option for the Software You Use. ## Scanning and Managing Images Scanning pictures is a quick and easy way to get some digital pictures on your computer, but it's also a relatively inexpensive way to turn you into a 24/7 image camera. Sure, it doesn't replace a "real" camera, but it's a great way to save yourself the hassle of running around with a bulky camera and tripods. Just scan your photos, and you're good to go. To scan your images, you need a compatible scanner and a compatible scanner driver. You can scan a variety of formats including TIFF, EPS, and JPEG. A scanner is an analog-to-digital device that produces a digital copy of an image as an electronic file on your computer. You can scan a range of photos (such as JPEGs, TIFFs, and JPEGs) or documents. Using Photoshop, you can edit scanned images right on the original, so you don't have to rescan an edited version (which often involves lots of manual resizing). The main advantage of a scanner is that it's cheap and easy, and it's easy to share your pictures with family and friends. You can organize your scanned images into albums so you can find them easily later.

Recent Posts Monday, September 3, 2016 Moya Away! So, the Moya Away contest is over, and I'm not going to watch the results. I've been fretting about this for the past few weeks, as I saw how close so many of the votes came. It would've been easy for me to point the blame for the low winner on this posting. So, I'm going to blame it on the judges instead. They have the final say. This contest is a great one, and I tried to make it really fair. I am a rule follower, though, and I wanted to ensure that winners weren't unfairly chosen. I had to remove that rule on two sites, because there was just too much coming from those two sites. I would also like to thank all of the participants in the contest, as I really enjoyed having the other sites on board for this week. They made me think about how I want to run the contest in the future. Moya Away came out of that thinking process. I've been following the mixed critters, as I wanted to see how they would do in their first contest. It was a bit of a shock, as I feel like I can make a better critter than most, but I was impressed with how high they did. I definitely want to keep the levels lower next time. So, I'll probably be rolling out the new mixed critter contest next week. I had this idea that we could have an overall winner of the contest, and I'm going to call the winner the 'winner-in-chief'. I would like to thank all of the participants for making the campaign such a success. The Moya Away rules helped a lot, too, and I'm happy I was able to implement some of the suggestions from the poll. Now, I want to get back to posting rather than doing my other job for the next week or so. I'll announce a new contest next week, and that will be the mixed critter contest. I also want to have a video competition. I already have a winner in that contest, but I'm going to open it up for any contestant. After we've had a few videos, I'll announce the winner for that competition as well. Again, I'm going to be calling the winner the winner-in-chief. I think that by having two different winners, we'll have more contest participants. All of

Q: is it possible to retrieve only data from a table without 'select' function? I have this sql query `SELECT * FROM tbl_user_info WHERE c_name = 'john'`; this query is return more than one row. is it possible to only get data from this table. if not, is there a way to only retrieve data from a table with a specific value. A: An INNER JOIN between the table and itself, using a WHERE clause, should do it. `SELECT * FROM tbl_user_info WHERE c_name = 'john' AND tbl_user_info.c_name = 'john'` A: You can use `NOT IN()` or `NOT EXISTS()`. `SELECT * FROM tbl_user_info WHERE c_name = 'john' AND NOT EXISTS (SELECT 1 FROM tbl_user_info WHERE c_name = 'john')` Q: c++ `std::filesystem::path` doesn't properly append to string I'm working on a C++ project that uses the `std::filesystem::path` for several things. One of my functions takes a path and returns a `std::string` to be used for actually storing the path. However, I am having a very weird problem. When the function is finished with the string, I print out the contents of the string and notice that it prints it out exactly as the path was passed in. However, the problem is that when I attempt to use the string that was returned and try to print out the contents of the string, nothing is appended to it. For example, when my function prints out the contents of the path, I notice that the path no longer has the trailing slash. I have tried making the string a `const char*` and explicitly converting it to a `char*`, but that has no effect. I am using Visual Studio 2015 and I have tried using `std::filesystem::absolute` and `std::filesystem::relative`, but I get the same problem. `void savePath(std::filesystem::path path) { std::string pathAsString;`
