Early Monday evening, Detroit Police were called to check out a report of a possible hit-and-run collision that happened near the intersection of Grand River and Kercheval. In surveillance video, you can see a man and a woman standing next to what appears to be a rental vehicle in a parking lot. As soon as the woman leaves the scene, the vehicle starts rolling. Investigators say the woman was taken to hospital by a friend after the driver-side door was "punched in." [Tumor thrombus in the vena cava: diagnosis and therapy]. Tumor thrombi in the main and in the side branches of the vena cava are rare and usually result from bronchial carcinoma or ovarian carcinoma. We report on the diagnosis and successful treatment of a 73-year-old woman with multiple, isolated, venous thrombi. Four years before admission she developed a right-sided cervical tumor. A clinical assessment revealed a metastatic tumor in the cervical region and a tumor thrombus of the vena cava. The patient was admitted to the oncology department for palliative therapy with chemotherapy and radiotherapy. Despite surgery, intensive systemic and palliative radiotherapy and chemotherapy, the patient died 6 months later, due to progressive tumor disease. We report a patient who had both early detection of a venous tumor thrombus and successful palliative therapy. Copyright (C) 2011-2020 Aratelia Limited - Juan A.
