In addition to 'HyperMotion,' FIFA 22 features completely redesigned player animations, player likeness and playing style. Movements and actions are now more responsive, realistic and reflect players' true movements and play style. New animations for ball carrier runs and ball control actions also allow for more dynamic gameplay. More information on the new features in FIFA 22 can be found at use of polyurethanes as low density, reinforced, blown film extrudates for packaging applications is well known in the art. U.S. Pat. Nos. 2,827,288; 2,852,347; 3,068,296; 3,249,558; 3,276,898; 3,328,357; 3,841,898; 3,948,958; 3,959,545; 4,181,752; 4,298,598; 4,479,971 and 4,546,044 are representative of this art. The process for making such polyurethane reinforced films from prior art processes is generally expensive and time-consuming. In prior art processes, formation of the fibrous reinforce material is accomplished in two separate steps by forming the fibrous material and then mixing the fibrous material with a polyurethane or polyisocyanate in an extruder. In more sophisticated processes, the prior art teaches the formation of the reinforcing fibers in a solution by impregnating the cellulose material with the polyurethane or polyisocyanate solution, drying, and then forming a film from the mixed polymeric material. See, for example, U.S. Pat. Nos. 3,948,958 and 4,181,752. The prior art processes are generally complicated and time-consuming, require an extruder or solution form, and result in films having low surface gloss and poor high-speed printing characteristics. Japanese Patent Publication Nos. 59-224818 and 59-224819 disclose a process wherein a solution of a polyurethane resin or a polyisocyanate and a solution of an ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymer are blended, the resin then precipitated by adding an appropriate solvent to the blend.
